

TELECON
Dobrynin/Kissinger
October 7, 1973
4:40 pm

.....
K: Where is your grandaughter?

D:...

K: You're going all the way down there tonight? Are you planning an attack tonight.

D: You watch from 5-11.

K: Anatoyl, I wanted you to know what the President has decided to do. We'll announce at 5:00 we are asking for a S. C. meeting.

D: When are you announcing?

K: In about 45 minutes, it shouldn't be on the TASS tickers before that. We haven't yet decided whether we will propose a resolution or what it will be. It may be just a discussion. But we don't see how we can avoid asking for a session. I think its useful... keep the principle we discussed yesterday and we keep calm with each other. If your Ambassador conducts himself the same way we will get through the day. I'll let you know in the morning... we're not going to table a resolution tonight even if we table one tomorrow -- we can discuss. I will let you know a couple of hours before we do it.

D: alright.

K: The President comes back tonight and I will have a change to talke with him. I understand your view.... a certain lapse in events that may overtake our discussion.

D: Alright.

K: That's why we're not tabling anything. That gives us several hours to decide what to do.

D: We can ask for instructions from the government.

K: We are not going to push you and if you don't push us.

D: no, no.

K: Right now we must get the Security Council to . . . All the best the best to your granddaughter and tell _____ that next time he won't be treated so nicely.

D: OK. goodby.